

A—BAR EXTENSION BRACKET

ILLUSTRATED FITTING MANUAL

You will need:

- General workshop tools

1. Our A-Bar/ Nudge bar extension bracket provides additional space to enable the fitting of the A-Bar/ Nudge bar to a Land Rover Defender with Air Conditioning. The air conditioning extension bracket can be secured to the chassis by using the existing fittings for the bumper. The extension bracket may also require a nut insert (NRC6994)(Superceded by ALQ710020) to the M10 Bolts which go though both pieces of the bracket securely.

2. Before fitting the bottom piece of the extension bracket into the chassis, the nut insert needs to be carefully placed in

3. This can be quite tricky to position correctly so it is recommended that you use a screwdriver or a magnetic stick.

4. Carefully position the nut insert

5. Now Insert the lower half of the extension bracket into the Chassis bumper Connection

6. The lower section of the extension bracket can be fitted into the Chassis Bumper connection

7. Position the top section of the extension bracket and insert 2 bolts through the screw holes to secure the extension bracket to the chassis.

8. Carefully manoeuvre the nut insert until the securing bolts can be secured into it.

9. Fasten a bolt through the bracket to hold the sections together.

10. Tighten the bolts to secure both parts of extension bracket to the chassis.

Note: So that the fitting instruction can show sufficient detail as to how the fitting is undertaken, the images in the instruction show the fitting of the extension brackets without the bumper.

PERSONAL NOTES

A large, empty rounded rectangular box with a yellow border, intended for personal notes. The box is centered on the page and occupies most of the lower two-thirds of the page. The corners are rounded, and the border is a consistent yellow color. The interior of the box is white and completely blank.
